My Aunt is a therapist and my Mom is into mental health. There was nothing upsetting that I needed to talk about it...I thought it could be nice to talk to someone – my Aunt is so wise. This specific experience with this person – she made me feel like she didn't really care about me. I'd be open to talking to another one because I can see the benefits with it."

TRAUMATIC OR WONDERFUL LIFE EXPERIENCES: "In the last few years, I've been in a really, really good place. I love my life. There wasn't anything too traumatic, when my Dad moved away; it was kind of good thing for me. Things were tense with him and my stepmom. Now that he's in Utah, I feel like our relationship is so much healthier. Now that I've moved out from my Mom, I feel like my relationship has gotten so much better with her too. SELF-DESCRIPTION: "I'm very outgoing and I try to always be kind and accepting to everyone. It's not my place to judge anyone. I think everyone should be treated equally. My work ethic is really important and having a sense of independence and authenticity is important. Compassion and how we treat people we care about is the most important thing we can leave behind.”

MOTIVATION AND DISCUSSION ABOUT BEING AN EGG DONOR: “I think it’s an amazing thing that people do. I have a friend of a friend who did it and I think it’s beautiful. It was one conversation with my boyfriend and me about having kids. He has an irrational fear of his that he couldn’t have kids. I was thinking how sad it was to think about it – if we couldn’t have kids, and how hard it would be on us. I feel like it is on my heart as something I want to do.” (She became teary while expressing this.)

“At the fertility clinic, they said how many eggs I had. That also showed me I was blessed. I’d want someone to donate to me if I didn’t have that.”

Regarding the compensation, “I will probably use half of it to kick start some of the equipment I need for the photography. I might donate half of it too. I was talking to my grandma about charities, too – maybe a children’s hospital.”

REGARDING DISCLOSURE, CONTACT AND THE FUTURE:

- 2087 has shared with her mother. “She was very excited and my Aunt was too. My Grandma was apprehensive at first, asking about having kids with my DNA. I know the woman I donate to will have that child inside her, raise her, and in all respects that will be her child. This isn’t as big of a concern of mine as she had. Then, she was excited after we talked about it. She also got excited thinking about charities too. My boyfriend is also very excited about it, and he feels similarly to me.” She hasn’t shared with her father as he lives so far away and this is something she would want to discuss in person.
- 2087 would tell any future partner and would tell her children.
- 2087 is very aware egg donation is different than donating blood, and there will be children in other families with her DNA. “I can’t explain why, but it doesn’t bother me. I have thought of that since it is the reality of donating my eggs. I think it will be a beautiful thing to raise that child. It’s in all ways her child. My DNA pales in comparison to the women who are the parents.”
- If she were contacted in 20 years, “It’s not like adoption. She can show a video of giving birth to him or her. I would be fine with that. I try to think about this whole experience from the perspective of who is receiving the eggs.”
- 2087 would advise EFS if there were any discovery of a special need or genetically correlated condition with members of her family.
- 2087 is willing to undergo any additional testing if requested by EFS during the process.
- 2087 would like to be told if any child were born with any medical genetically correlated condition.

- If she struggles with fertility issues, 2087 stated, “I’ve spent a lot of time thinking about this. Especially, when I spoke to the first woman at EFS about how it is rare, but there are potential risks. I am aware this is a risk I’m going to take and it’s OK.”
- 2087 is aware that once retrieved, her eggs become the property of the Intended Parents and they will make all decisions regarding their disposition.

2087 understands Elite requests she exclusively affiliate with them. She was on another egg donor website and there was no screening and it was located on the East coast. It made her feel very uncomfortable. She feels Elite is very professional and makes her feel valued.

There is no evidence of any financial or emotional coercion to participate.

2087 has been to the Newport Beach, CA, office, which is about a 45-minute commute for her. She thinks scheduling will not be a problem as she makes her own schedule. She is aware she may be asked to travel via airplane and she is willing to do so. She asked if anyone accompanies her and how long she stays. It was recommended she discuss any specifics with personnel at Elite.

2087 has traveled to San Francisco this past year. She understands there can be travel restrictions.

2087 feels there will be no psychological risks to her now or in the future by participating as an egg donor. “I feel very good about doing this.”

IMPACT OF COVID-19: 2087 was diagnosed with COVID-19 in December 2019. She had a high fever for a few days. She also was diagnosed with the Omnicron variant in November 2020. Similar symptoms occurred. 2087 is not vaccinated and does not plan on getting a vaccine for COVID-19.

She currently wears a mask when it is mandated. She has been cautious around seeing members of her family. She is back to normal for the most part. At school, she wears a mask since there are so many people. With her friends and family, she does not. At stores, she usually is masked now. When working at weddings, 2087 wears a mask depending on the comfort level of the clients.

2087 understands she may be asked to wear a mask while participating in the egg donor program whenever she is in public, understanding that should she test positive for COVID-19, the cycle will be cancelled. She understands frequent COVID-19 testing may be part of the protocol.

2087 is aware egg donation schedules could be impacted and are subject to change. She is totally comfortable going to the doctor’s office for the screening, lab work and medical procedures required. She understands it is possible she will need to go independently for the majority of the appointments. Her boyfriend will drive her home after the egg retrieval.

QUESTIONS: She asked what the next steps are, wondering if her profile is now live. She also asked if she will be anesthetized for the egg retrieval. For both inquiries, she was referred to Elite personnel. There were no additional questions for me.

CLINICAL IMPRESSIONS AND RECOMMENDATION: 2087 is an active and friendly young woman who is self-sufficient and self-reliant. She is a very sweet, kind and thoughtful young woman who is very motivated to be an egg donor.

2087's mental status was within normal limits and there was no evidence of intellectual impairment. Her emotional expression was within the normal range. No disturbances in thought processes or content were observed. 2087 thoughtfully responded to all inquiries. She has a strong support system.

She agrees to follow doctor's orders including but not limited to restricted activity, limitations in exercise, diet, travel, periods of abstinence and any risky activities. She is aware this may include being masked, as she is not vaccinated for COVID-19.

2087 understands the lifelong ramifications of donating her eggs.
